VINIFICATION

The rosé vinification of each grape variety respects the potential developed on the vine to extract the full aromatic potential of this sophisticated wine. Once the grapes have been unloaded, they are left to macerate on the skins for a short time in order to extract the colour necessary to obtain a powder pink hue. The grapes are gently pressed and the must fermented, which allows the wine to retain its sophisticated aromatic complexity. Once fermented, the wine rests on the yeasts for at least four months, which gives it depth and persistence on the palate

Once it has been bottled, it is kept in the cellars for a month before being put on the market
